Tarzan was relieved when Tantor's unexpected charge drove To-yat into the jungle; for Tarzan found no pleasure in quarreling with the Mangani. He never forgot that he had been nursed by Kala, the she-ape, nor that he had grown to manhood in the tribe of Kerchak.

Tantor watched while the ape-man knelt beside the prostrate girl. Tarzan had thought her dead, but he discovered that she was only in a swoon. He spoke a few words to the great pachyderm, who started off into the jungle, making a path for Tarzan and the girl.

Tantor, the elephant, halted at last upon the bank of a considerable river. Twining his trunk around their bodies, he lifted the two gently to his broad back. Then he waded into the river and set out for the opposite shore. Here again, he went ahead making trail.

At last, when he broke into a broad, well-marked game trail, Tarzan took the lead and Tantor followed. When Zora Drinov opened her eyes, she realized that her cheek was not pressing against a shaggy coat, but against the smooth skin of a human body.

Lawyer, Detective, Screen Star
Heroes of New Films in Atlanta

By RALPH T. JONES.

Three new feature pictures were introduced to Atlanta on Saturday while at another theater one of the best productions of the year returned for a second engagement.

The first two are "If I Were Free," the title of the offering which stars Clive Brook and Irene Dunne. The Georgia has "Lady Killer," with James Cagney as the star and Mae Clarke as his main feminine support.

"Before Midnight," with Ralph Bellamy and June Collyer is the attraction at the Rialto.

The first two are booked for week runs, while the Rialto will change its bill next Wednesday to a return showing of George Arliss in "Voltaire."

And at the Capitol "Only Yesterday," the picture that made Margaret Sullivan famous overnight and with John Boles as the masculine lead, is showing for four days, through Tuesday.

"If I Were Free."

The Paramount presents another of those pictures about a lawyer who appears to prefer liquid bars to law bars and case goods to law cases. Clive Brook is the lawyer and, sober or otherwise, he is always the polished, perfect actor.

In this story he adds to his weakness for liquid affairs an unfortunate situation domestically, another tendency rather overplayed by the makers of pictures. His wife is emphatically not the helpmeet he needs but she will not concur in any divorce.

Clive meets the woman he ought to have married in the person of Irene Dunne. But she, alas, is unhappily married, also. To a villain of foreign blood, titled but utterly unscrupulous. So here, you see, is that popular screen situation—they love but the law and convention forbid. What do they do? Why, break the rules and love regardless. Don't you know your Hollywood?

The plot gets complicated when, after both have won back to material success in life, the lady lets her conscience disturb the even tenor of their affair.

Clive, however, is doomed to quick death unless he undergoes a 100 to 1 shot operation. He takes the chance and, in the hospital, wife and lady friend meet, fight their battle in unusual manner and the happy ever-after.

ending is made possible when the operation succeeds and Brook recovers. Perhaps the odds weren't so long after all.

No picture with Brook and Dunne in it could possibly be less than good entertainment, but scenario writers really should develop a new viewpoint and acquire a different love theme.

"Lady Killer."

James Cagney is the man, you recall, who first leaped to screen fame over the forms of various lovely ladies who had been used most ungalantly. One, I remember, was buried in the street with a grapefruit and another was smartly kicked in the—

Of course, after such escapades, hero roles were inevitable for Cagney. This time in "Lady Killer" at the Georgia, he is an ex-gangster who decides to reform by going to Hollywood and entering the picture industry. Naive fellows, these gangsters. He mounts quickly to fame, but is continually pestered by gorgeous women who just won't leave him alone. Some of them are resurrections from his former gangster career and others are newly-attracted moths to the candle of his screen fame.

He industriously hurls them from his path and out of his apartment. The picture reaches its climax when he drags Mae Clarke, the chief of the feminine pursuers, across the floor by her hair.

Mae survives the rough stuff with true Brunhilde spirit and, eventually, succeeds in landing the prize in the net of matrimony. A good story, with lots of snappy lines and Cagney at his toughest best.

But wouldn't you like a glimpse at the home life of this Cagney lad? I'll bet Mrs. Cagney doesn't stand for grapefruit facials and back hair towings.

"Before Midnight."

Do you like good detective stories? Where the murder is committed in the first chapter and you follow the master sleuth, clue by clue, through succeeding developments until at last he puts the finger on the real murderer?

If you do like these thrillers, you'll enjoy "Before Midnight," now showing at the Rialto.

Ralph Bellamy is the detective and the murdered man is an eccentric millionaire who feared a violent death even before the killer struck. So he had the detective on hand and, eventually, the killer is uncovered. Of course, this doesn't save the millionaire's life, because he had to be killed in the beginning to provide the crime to be detected—but what else can a poor author do?

Jane Collyer is an attractive feminine interest and Claude Gillingwater adds to the picture an especially fine performance.

A cooking-murder yarn, logical, enthralling and mystifying, with only one slip noted. That slip is that cyanide of potassium, the poison used, kills absolutely instantaneously, whereas in the picture it takes 10 minutes or so for it to act after the victim has absorbed it into the blood. However, that's small matter.

New Burlesque Show.

"Scanties of 1934" is the title of the new burlesque show which will be presented at the Atlanta theater tonight at 8:30. There will be no matinee today.

Colorful stage sets, with lovely posing girls adding to the lure of the picture, are featured in the production.

Culbertson on Contract

Responding to a Takeout Double.

BY ELY CULBERTSON
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

It is an axiom accepted by all good bridge players that the weaker hand more imperative it is to respond when partner has made a takeout double of an opposing bid. Failure to do this is not only dangerous from the standpoint of points made or lost but strikes at the root of partnership morale as, if a player makes a takeout double and his partner fails to respond to it, and the opponents make overtricks or even barely fulfill their contract, the doubler will remember that weakness in his partner's bidding and in consequence make a bad matter worse. This question, as I say, is one on which there is no disagreement between experts. It was submitted to me by R. Earl Bryan, of Lakewood, Ohio, who states that recently the hand below was dealt:

East, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.
9 8 3 2
10 7 6 5 2

Q 8
Q 7 6 4 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
INT	DBL	Pass	Pass
Pass

The contract was defeated two tricks. Naturally, Mr. Bryan asked his partner the question, "Why did you pass?" The reply was, "I was too weak. I could not see game for us."

The North player then sought to justify his position by pointing out that at best North and South could have made three spades or three hearts and that the penalty of 500 points secured by passing the double was preferable. Applied to this particular hand and this particular situation North was right, but South might easily have had a sound take-out double and East have been able to make his contract of one no-trump. Equally, South might have had greater top-card strength in spades and then a game at a major suit would have been possible. If, for instance, South had held the spade ten, had North's hand been only slightly stronger, his pass of the takeout double could be justified, as, of course, South's double of an adverse no-trump bid shows a hand very strong and well prepared for practically any response that North may make, even a penalty pass. But with only one king, a bid by North was imperative and this is just as true even though a good result was obtained on the board.

TOMORROW'S HAND.

If North and South reach a contract of six spades, should East double with his holding?

South, dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

Both Culbertson Teams Beaten
In Semi-Finals of Bridge Match

By BRIAN COLLIER.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(P)—Two New York bridge teams will play for the United States Bridge Association's grand national championship without a representative from the Culbertson household.

The teams of Ely Culbertson and his wife were eliminated today.

Mrs. Culbertson's team of herself, Wildemar Von Zedtwitz, Edward Hynes and Louis H. Watson was defeated tonight by a team composed of David Burnstine, Oswald Jacoby, Howard Schenken and Michael Gottlieb.

The margin of victory was 2,740 points.

Culbertson's team was eliminated early today by the combination of Walter Malowan, Lane Langdon, Sidney Rusinoff and L. Bachner.

A luckless double by Theodore A. Lightner, Culbertson's partner, was responsible for the team's defeat.

After 62 boards last night, Mrs. Culbertson's team trailed its opponents by 170 points.

Because of a new rule requiring that the victors in a semi-final match have a margin of at least 750, they agreed to play it off today at Cockfords, Culbertson's New York club.

The final match will be at 100 boards tomorrow and Tuesday.

Here is the big hand that spelled defeat for Ely Culbertson's clan:

North (Culbertson)
S-A 8 4 3 2
H-K 10 3
D-9 7 2
C-8
West (Rusinoff)
S-K 9
H-A 5 2
D-A Q
C-Q J 7 4 2
South (Lightner)
S-Q 10 7
H-8 4
D-J 8 6 4 3

The bidding by East and West was extremely shrewd. West passed originally and Culbertson said a semi-psyche spade which, later results showed, partially deceived his partner. East made a "waiting" pass; South passed and West doubled. Culbertson repeated his spades; East said three clubs; South passed; West said three no-trump, and two passes brought it to South, who hitherto had been silent. For some reason he doubled—the bid went around to East.

who redoubled, ending the action. Culbertson led away from his spade ace, West capturing. The double heart finesse worked well and it was then a laydown for the grand slam. Both sides were vulnerable, so East and West scored 1,000 for four overtricks, 500 for game and 400 for the redoubled three no-trumps, a total of 2,500 and the largest score amassed on a single hand during the matches. This was partially discounted by the fact that Morehead and Fry bid three and made five no-trump at East and West in the other room, but it went undoubled and their score was only 670. The net anti-Culbertson swing on this one hand was, therefore, 1,830. They lost the match by only 1,990.

Lightner, commenting afterwards, made no attempt to alibi his strange double, saying simply: "I have had a brainstorm." Culbertson said his semi-psyche blocked the possible small slam in clubs.

Said Culbertson of Lightner: "I'll still choose him as my partner against the world."

REPORTED ON RIVIERA

NICE, France, Jan. 14.—(P)—Mme. Magda Lupescu, former consort of King Carol of Rumania, was reported in the local press today to have arrived at the Riviera.

It was said she had to leave Bucharest as a result of the recent cabinet shakeup following the assassination of Premier Ion Duca.

Inquiries at Monte Carlo, Cannes and Nice proved fruitless, resulting only in claims that she was not known to be in the vicinity.

Savannah Negro Cupid Spurred by CWA Wages

SAVANNAH, Ga., Jan. 14.—The CWA is working in an unexpected manner in Savannah. It is keeping the colored cupid busy. Saturday, for instance, there were 13 marriage licenses issued at the ordinary office for negro couples and this is an unprecedented number. Everybody agrees that the high wages and steady work being supplied by the civil works administration is bringing this condition about. The fact is very prominent that the CWA means, among other things, "Colored Wedding Advancing."

Indoors, do you fuss about the house being too warm or too drafty? Outdoors, do you complain about the cold and dampness "going right through you?"

Of course, other people feel these things too! People in the best condition can't afford to take unnecessary risks.

But perhaps you are affected more by these conditions than others. What you probably need most is good resistance.

And now there's a way for you to help yourself! Regular pills begin! With the help of daily resistance-building—Squibb Adex Tablets—10 D!

Squibb Adex offers to people who need building-up the factors from three vitamin sources—halibut, cod-liver oils with Viosterol! They provide an abundance of resistance-building Vitamin A, 1500 units with every tablet. They also contain 2450 units of sunshine Vitamin D.

Help prepare yourself for the extra tax at this time of year. Try this resistance-building tablet now. Take Adex regularly every day.

Now—at any reliable drug store—Squibb Adex Tablets—10 D! Prepared by processes which give them unique vitamin values and are exclusive with E. R. Squibb & Sons, manufacturing chemists since 1858.

sheriff of Fulton county in 1933 following the death of Chief Deputy Claude Register. He had been on the staff of Sheriff James I. Lowry for many years and was widely known and very popular, not only in Atlanta and Fulton county but throughout the state.

Born in Jasper county on June 29, 1870, of an old southern family, Mr. Mayo spent the first 25 years of his life in Butts county, where his father, John Mason Thomas Mayo, was a leading citizen for many years. The chief received his early education in the schools of Follisville, in Butts county, and was associated with his father in farming, milling and mercantile business until he first came to Atlanta in 1895.

He was connected with the Atlanta-Terra Cotta Works at various times during the early part of his career and became interested in police work when he was a special patrolman during the months of the Cotton States International Exposition in 1895.

After he severed his connection with the police department of the city, Mr. Mayo became a deputy sheriff and was associated in many of the famous criminal cases in the history of the county.

He was married, July 28, 1888, to the former Miss Annie Laura White, a childhood friend and schoolmate, who also resided in Butts county. Nine children were born to them.

Nine Children Survive. He is survived by his wife; four daughters, Mrs. W. O. Rutledge, Mrs. C. G. Palmer, Mrs. W. W. Wynn and Miss Mary Mayo; five sons, H. L. J. M. W. M. Jr., A. D. and A. W. Mayo; two brothers, R. A. and A. W. Mayo, the latter of Des Moines, Iowa; and four sisters, Mrs. W. L. Bradford, Mrs. G. W. Moore, Mrs. A. M. Lee, and Mrs. O. A. Duke, the latter of Brixton, Ga. The others reside in Atlanta.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the Capitol View Baptist church, of which he was a member. The Rev. W. Lee Cutts will officiate and interment will be in Greenwood cemetery. The Oglethorpe lodge, No. 655, F. & A. M., will have charge of the graveside rites.

SNELL FORESEES VICTORY FOR PACT

Republican House Leader
Predicts Senate Will Follow Roosevelt.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(UP) Representative Bertrand Snell, republican, New York, turned up tonight in the unexpected character of a Roosevelt administration supporter against democratic opposition, with a statement predicting senate ratification of the St. Lawrence waterway treaty.

Snell is minority leader of the house, and his statement, which called upon republican senators to vote for ratification, was regarded as a clever political move. It is unusual for a party leader in the house to take such a firm advisory position regarding a matter like treaty ratification which is entirely in the hands of the senate.

Several democratic leaders have forecast privately that the treaty would not receive the two-thirds majority necessary for ratification, and polls of the senate have indicated that this was true.

Snell, however, said he believed that republican senators would stick "to the pledge contained in the republican platform of 1932 and feel an obligation to support a treaty negotiated and consummated under the last republican regime." He said that "the party whip has been cracked on the democratic side," and forecast that few democrats would "oppose their president on an issue as important as this."

He said he had made a survey "to ascertain the truth behind the current whispering campaign to defeatism, and that opposition would decrease as facts were set forth in the senate debate which started last week."

80-Mile Gale Spreads Destruction in Britain

LONDON, Jan. 14.—(UP)—The hardest storm of winter whipped over southern England and Wales early today, leaving a trail of wreckage. The gale reached a velocity of 80 miles an hour at Plymouth and 60 miles in London. The battleship Nelson, leaving a port of Plymouth, was to join her home fleet and will make the trip tomorrow.

Some cross-channel ships cancelled their trips this morning and the liner La Fayette was unable to land 24 passengers from New York at Plymouth, proceeding direct to Le Havre. Two men and two women, the latter clad only in night-clothes, were forced to jump into the sea from a yacht which broke anchor at Bembridge, Isle of Wight. They were rescued by coastguardsmen. The boat in which the couples were starting a world tour was grounded.

NRA Boon to Women In Textile Industry

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(UP)—The national recovery administration has definitely improved the wages and working hours of women in cotton mills, the women's bureau of the department of labor announced tonight after a survey of the industry.

It showed that before adoption of the cotton textile code, full time women workers were receiving an average of $11.10 a week in Texas mills, and $9.45 in South Carolina and $13 in Maine.

The code set minimum wages of $13 in northern mills and $12 in southern.

The bureau said the code had shortened hours materially and ended such practices as using women on night shifts. The gain in Maine was in hours rather than wages, with the average number of hours worked dropping while the average wage held unchanged.

LABOR TO RENDER OPINION ON NRA

Washington Conference on January 24 To Hear
Definite Reports.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—(AP) Heads of the international unions composing the American Federation of Labor will gather in Washington, January 24, to report on actual operation of NRA all over the country and to draft a program of legislative demands to protect worker interests.

The A. F. of L. program probably will be the signal for numerous efforts to amend the industrial law, most of which are being held in abeyance by their sponsors until labor decides what it wants.

Besides the reports of the union heads, the federation is having assembled a survey of NRA results outside of union channels. College economists have been enlisted for this task to give the result an impartial tinge.

At present the feeling of labor leaders, as privately expressed, combines dissatisfaction and alarm. Outraged by the NRA's failure to support NRA principles and assist on a 30-hour work week and a say in the government of coal industries. The federation estimates of re-employment, however, are considered frankly discouraging. The labor statisticians report 6,400,000 new jobs made under the entire recovery program, including the public works and civil works administration, but at the same time place the number of those still jobless at 10,702,000, suggesting a constant loss in regular employment. At the low point of last March the unemployment estimate stood at 13,900,000.

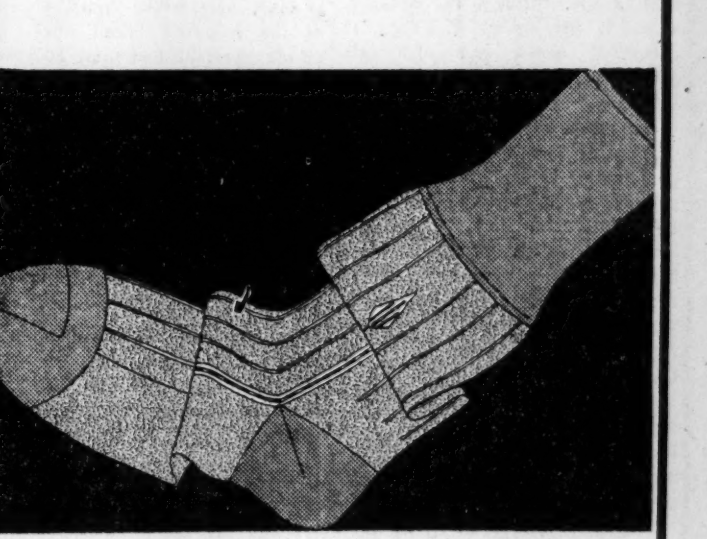

Balbo Leaves Italy For Duties in Africa

NAPLES, Italy, Jan. 14.—(P)—General Italo Balbo sailed today aboard a cruiser to take up his new post as governor of Libya. Dispatches from the city of Tripoli said tribesmen were pouring in from desert regions to participate in colorful welcoming ceremonies for the hero of the mass flight to America last summer.

The general is scheduled to arrive tomorrow. Although many likened his appointment to a political post to a form of exile, Balbo accepted the assignment without complaint.

Premier Mussolini personally praised him before the chamber of deputies shortly before his departure and high officials escorted him to the station when he left Rome last night.

ATLANTA, GA., JAN. 15, 1934.

THE NEW HIGHWAYS.

Warning that the United States now has but few highways designed to accommodate in safety the wear and tear of high-speed automobiles, Charles M. Upham, director of the American Road Builders' Association, in a recent statement points out that "it is bad economics to ignore current and future traffic demands" in future highway construction.

The type of highway which was considered the finest that could be built five, or even ten years ago, would now, in view of the revolutionary progress in the development of the automobile, be not only dangerous to traverse, but would last but a short time.

Before the recent trend towards added weight in all classes of motor vehicles and the large increase in speed, a comparatively inexpensive base, with a thin surfacing of hard, smooth material, was all that was required to constitute a first-quality highway. Such a road now would soon crumble under the wearing effect of heavy vehicles, being driven at high speed.

The highway of today, to withstand the use to which it will be subjected, and to offer safety to the motorist, should be built to accommodate huge weights, must be scientifically banked, and must have none but sweeping curves.

In his statement Mr. Upham holds that "the modern tendency to increase speed of the automobile can only be made an effective factor, instead of an interesting industrial toy, through the development of high-speed highways in congested areas and of roads equipped for safety in other sections."

Already a definite start towards the construction of the new type of highways in territory within and adjacent to large centers of population has been made in the construction of the West Side elevated highway in New York, the elevated and depressed express highway from Elizabeth, N. J., to the Holland tunnel, and the Wacker drive in Chicago.

The need for new high-speed highways in Georgia is illustrated by the inadequacy of the present highway from Atlanta to Macon to properly serve the motor traffic between these two cities. Narrow and full of dangerous curves for most of its distance, traffic conditions on it are congested and dangerous, whereas if constructed along the lines of the new high-speed highways it could be used by the same amount of traffic without congestion and with a minimum of danger.

The Decatur-Lawrenceville-Buford highway is another illustration of the unfitness of old-time roads to meet the demands of modern traffic. With but few straight stretches of any considerable distance, it is an invitation to accidents in view of the increased speed of automobiles, and, although only a few years old, is already beginning to go to pieces under the pounding of the heavier vehicles of today.

One of the new-type highways is badly needed to handle the heavy traffic between Marietta and Atlanta, the present inadequate road being such as to cause frequent accidents and make the time necessary for the trip much longer than it should be. This highway is the only paved route into Marietta for the traffic that funnels into Marietta over the highway from Chattanooga and Canton.

The traffic brought in by these two highways from north and northwest Georgia and from out of the state, added to the normal traffic between Marietta and Atlanta, has created an urgent need for a modern, high-speed highway between these two points.

Fortunately steps are already under way to relieve the congestion on all three of these important Georgia highways. The new road from Atlanta to Macon via Mc-

Donough is under way; contracts have been let for the improvement of the unpaved links of the road from Atlanta to Buford via Norcross, and the federal government is co-operating with the state towards the construction of a new highway from Marietta to Atlanta.

All of these roads should be built in accordance with modern specifications, for it has been amply proven that it is a waste of money, and contributes to the dangers of the roads, to lay any other type of pavement in view of the increase in the speed and weight of motor vehicles.

H. WARNER HILL.
Associate Justice H. Warner Hill, of the Georgia supreme court, whose death occurred Saturday after a lingering illness, was one of the south's most distinguished lawyers and jurists.

A member of the highest court in the state for 23 years, Judge Hill had previously served as a member of the state railroad commission, as representative in the general assembly from Meriwether county and as mayor of Greenville. He served as president of the People's Bank of Greenville for a number of years, was a trustee of Emory University and Wesleyan Female College, and for many years had been an outstanding lay leader of the Methodist Episcopal church.

During his long career he also manifested a keen interest in the various fraternal organizations, having served as high priest of the Royal Arch Masons of Georgia and as worshipful master of the blue lodge at Greenville.

Descended from distinguished lineage, in which were to be found the Puritans of New England and the Cavaliers of Virginia, the finest characteristics of both were combined in Judge Hill. Of marked judicial temperament, he possessed the best qualities of the hardy pioneers of America and the progressiveness and broad vision of the public men of today. He was actuated by the highest ideals both in his private life and his public service.

During his long service on the supreme bench of Georgia, Judge Hill was called on to pass upon many intricate questions of law and the decisions written by him are now included among the soundest and most important rulings in American legal procedure. His outstanding ability, his habit of intense study of difficult problems and the soundness of his decisions won for him widespread respect among the members of the Georgia bar.

The state loses a valuable and distinguished public servant and the bar one of its most esteemed members in the death of this able Georgia jurist.

GOTHAM "DEAD LINE" PASSES.
Promise of the elimination of what has long been an anomalous condition affecting the control of crime in New York is contained in the abolition by General John F. O'Ryan, new police commissioner, of the so-called "dead line" for criminals established some 50 years ago.

Under this remarkable policy of the police department, known criminals were allowed to roam at will, without fear of arrest, so long as they did not cross Fulton street into lower Manhattan, a comparatively small section of the city.

Now Commissioner O'Ryan has moved the "dead line" to the city limits, thereby serving notice on criminals of every type that they are liable to be "picked up" without warning and at any time that they show their faces on the city streets.

While the "dead line" has been more imaginary than actual during recent years, the pronouncement of the new fusion police commissioner is certain to have a salutary effect on the criminal element in the city.

If the order means that every denizen of the underworld in New York—who would live by their wits and by deeds of violence—will be under the constant surveillance of the police, a vast improvement in crime conditions in the nation's largest city is sure to result.

The same improvement would ensue in every other city in the country if the criminal element were advised that in future their comings and goings would be under such continuous surveillance that it would not be healthy for them to attempt to break the law.

THE WORLD'S WINDOW

BY PIERRE VAN PAASSEN.

Bethlehem Bells.

Millions of people heard the bells of Bethlehem on Christmas morning when the campana of the Church of the Nativity, in the little Judean town, was put on a world-wide broadcasting net. The idea was an excellent one, for it brought home to all of us in a rather dramatic manner that the earth is growing smaller all the time and that Bethlehem is not some vague, distant and intangible something, but that it exists and that it may come within earshot even.

The voice of Bethlehem, however, is not confined to church bells. Another message came from there also. It is to be hoped that in this new year the whole world may be penetrated with the importance of that message, which speaks about "peace on earth."

Apart from the sentimental value of the bells of Bethlehem, I don't think much of their musical perfection. I would have liked to have heard the international broadcasting systems switch their sensitive ears in yet another direction. Why can't we have a carillon concert from some Flemish or Dutch singing tower next time, or even at Easter? I think the arrangement can easily be made now, for the United States minister to Holland, William Gorman Rice, is one of the greatest living experts on bell music. He has written extensively on the subject and must be having a splendid time in the tower, right in the shadow, or at least within earshot of the St. Jacob's tower, where the carillon has just been repaired and is in the hands of a famous "bellringer," bell player.

Or why not let St. Mary's clock-tower of Antwerp give us a concert in America, or Malines, where the famous Doyne does the playing, or Bruges, or Gand, or Utrecht. There is no lack of carillons to make a choice. I think Americans will appreciate a concert of that kind.

War in The Air.

German periodicals print maps showing the thousands of aeroplanes, and long lines marking the "radius of action" of the machines point to the heart of Germany. In Munich recently there were rehearsals of defense against air raids. There were rehearsals of the same kind in Tokyo. The city was "attacked" by an enemy patrol of Japan's southern coast. Raids were made by day and by night. By day, smoke screens were sent up from the city; at night, all lights were put out, gas masks were issued, special ambulances, ambulance parties and fire brigades carried out their assigned parts.

In part, all this is propaganda. In Germany it is intended to draw attention to the defenseless nature of the country against neighbors heavily armed with the most destructive weapon, and to secure support for a government which is proposing to defend vigorously for equality. In Japan, where the military rulers are enforcing an ambitious program, it is designed to suggest the vulnerability of the nation and the need for sacrifice.

But there is another aspect of these rehearsals. It is that nowadays, wherever a people is geographically exposed to attack by air, it assumes as a matter of course that the attack will come and that it will be directed against money against the civil population. Not only Munich, which is helpless, assumes this, but even Tokyo, which is protected both by a great fleet and air force and by thousands of miles of sea. The peculiar attribute of aeroplanes is that superior strength offers no certain defense against them. In an air war no multiplication by any one of the defensive aeroplanes and guns will save its cities from attack. War will be a competition in destruction in which both sides will win great victories. Victories and vanquished will each make a desolation in order to call it peace.

Carriage indeed may burn, but so will the German, for the Constitution.

Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

ARE YOU SUSCEPTIBLE TO CATARRHS?

It is only in the past 20 years or less that America has become the greatest center for postgraduate medical instruction. Prior to this generation Europe, particularly Germany and Austria, had the largest number of physicians was quite the cat's until he had his fling at postgraduate study in Europe, though the home boys were not at all factious about what the pampered youth studied over there. It was different when the scandalous shooters taught publishers the physiology of circulation.

The German, I think, are responsible for most of the quackery in American medicine. I don't mean honest newspaper, radio and almanac quackery, but the subtle sort which every physician, surgeon or specialist practices more or less, consciously or without malice aforethought. It comes from German psychology.

The fatal fascination in German psychology. It gets you before you can gather the wits to break the spell and beat a dissentient "habbit." When the German expounder gets into his hate like a system, he interrupts; his very earnest absorption, and his rapt conviction in the right and truth of his idea, forbid the slightest. So you just step aboard and ride with him.

Here's Herr Dr. P. Schmidt expatiating in Deutsche med. Wchnsch. Dec. 2, 1932, on the idea: Subject for German analysis, Who's afraid of the Big I mean Who is Predisposed to Cateching Cold? and the shrewd Herr Schmidt explains what he means by "colds" before the general hum quiets down and you can get set to jump on his neck. "Colds," says he, are the common nasal, pharyngeal or bronchial catarrhs. Predisposition therefore may be congenital or acquired, and if the latter.

What would you get from the audience if you had the audacity to stop the beggar in the midst of his chatter about congenital and acquired predispositions to inquire, like a cringing idiot, what the common nasal, pharyngeal or bronchial catarrhs might be? Glances and contemptuous smiles. I tell you German psychology will not tolerate it.

Dr. Schmidt avers that normal persons may have their body heat-regulating mechanism put out of action temporarily by a fall into ice water, by alcohol, or by narcotics. But he candidly admits that persons who are not predisposed suffer no "catarrh" from the most rigorous chilling. He estimates that only about one person out of 10 is so predisposed.

Not a bad guy, at that. It is only the laborious way of the Teuton that grates on the Celtic. Now, if I were saying I'd say "Any one but an idiot knows that exposure to cold, wet feet, drafts, sudden changes are followed by no ill effect in nine cases out of 10." The tenth, we could debate with due respect to the rules.

A point I particularly wish to emphasize in the German doctor's eluc-

News Behind the News

By Paul Mallon.

SNORES WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—The Garner dynasty in congress is not dead, nor is it sleeping. The snores you hear from the vice president and his undercover boys are merely stage snores.

Down underneath, he and his associates are doing a strong but quiet job of leadership for the administration. Through their close friendship with Senator Pat Harrison and others, their influence in the senate is noticeable.

But they actually run the house.

PALS Their part is largely to devise the political strategy of how to get bills through and how to keep down insurrections. They have a big hand in writing important legislation and the biggest hand in getting it through.

The best key positions of committee chairmen are held by their crowd. Actually there are six chairmen of house committees from Texas—Jones, agriculture; Buchanan, appropriations; Rayburn, interstate commerce; Summers, judiciary; Lanham, public buildings; Mansfield, rivers and harbors. House members refer to it as the Texas dynasty, which, of course means Garner still is king.

The best tacticians in the house are Garner's pals—McDuffie of Alabama, Rayburn of Texas and Tuck Milligan of Missouri. You never read much about them in the newspapers, but they virtually run the show. Others make the speeches. They do the phlegmatic. Speaker Rainey plays ball with them more than the average house member suspects.

PAY CUT The other day on the pay cuts it appeared on the surface the fact that the Garner brain trust had a close call. Headlines proclaimed the fact that they squeezed their drastic administration bill through by only six votes.

What happened could only happen in the house. The big vote came on a motion to adopt the previous question. That shut off all debate and all chance of amending the strong gag rule. That was the place for the revolt to have made their big showing, if they really wanted to block the administration pay cut program.

But that motion was adopted by a safe majority of 37 votes.

STRATEGY That vote showed that the administration program was going to go through. So on the next vote some of the democrats took the opportunity of protecting themselves politically back and forth.

In that way they could register opposition to the pay cut theory and make a little hay for themselves with the government employees, and not block the president. It was just a political game. They were more frightened than the leaders when they noted there were so many jumpers that the vote was too close for comfort.

SAFETY It would be unfair to say all the jumpers switched for this naive political reason. Some are newcomers. They might, with justification, plead ignorance. They might say they did not know that the previous question was the one they should have sought to block. That would be true of a half dozen or more of the jumpers.

At any rate it indicates the rebellious boys are only for rebellion up to a safe point. They have no intention of really trying to stop Roosevelt.

At least that is the deduction privately made by the leaders.

WHITNEY A small disgruntled element inside and outside the stock exchange is planting stories around that Richard Whitney will be fired as president. They are trying to get some of the Washington liberals interested in the movement.

There was a rather serious effort made against Whitney a few months ago. Since then he has received confidential approval from the better class within the exchange. This crowd wants reform of the exchange from within and they approve Whitney's efforts in that respect.

In the light of this situation, the disgruntlers will probably not dare to oppose Whitney when the time for voting comes.

At least that is the way the most trustworthy insiders of the exchange figure the situation out.

There is no indication that the administration is going to take a hand in the affair one way or another. In fact there is some evidence indicating the administration approves Whitney's efforts to clean up.

NOTES The White House recently wanted to get in touch with the democratic whip of the house, but could not recall who he was. Inquiries were made in unofficial quarters, the name of the gentleman was obtained and he was then invited to see the president.

Congressman Milligan is supposed to have once made a confidential plea on prohibition repeal for Garner which was wrong by only one vote. He failed to count a man who was ill and not expected to appear. That is as near as anyone ever came to knowing in advance how 435 members of the house were going to vote.

The A. F. L. and postal employees lobbies are two of the strongest in Washington. The postal people particularly worked hard against Mr. Roosevelt's plan to restore only 5 per cent of the 15 per cent pay cut.

The big fellows in business and finance still feel optimistic about the general improvement. The way one expresses it is: "Roosevelt is the luckiest man alive because nothing can stop business improvement and when it comes nothing can stop him from getting all the credit for it." The administration experts are slightly less optimistic about the immediate extent of the improvement, but more positive that Roosevelt deserves the credit.

PROCESS SERVER ELIMINATED BY VALLEE

By DAVID LAWRENCE.

Rudy Leaves Officer at Studio Gate and Heads for New York.

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 14.—(AP)—Eluding a process server who waited for him at a film studio gate, Rudy Vallee, singing orchestra leader, was en route to New York tonight to fill theatrical engagements and ponder over his next move in his tangled marital affairs.

Accompanied by his secretary and Hyman Bushel, New York lawyer, Vallee, who failed to strike a note of harmony in his married life with Fay Webb Vallee, left the studio Saturday, moved to San Francisco, Cal., and boarded an east-bound train.

His Pacific coast attorney, S. S. Zagon, said Vallee left Los Angeles unexpectedly to fill theatrical engagements in New York, one of which calls for his appearance in a cafe the night of January 17. He said the separate maintenance action Mrs. Vallee filed against the singer last week had nothing to do with it.

It was generally understood at a movie ball last night that Vallee had hurried by car to Winslow, Ariz., to board the train, but Zagon said the connection was made at San Bernardino.

The process server, H. M. Fleming attempted to locate Vallee at his hotel and other Los Angeles and Hollywood stopping places of the singer but failed. He finally stationed himself at the entrance of the film studio where Vallee and Miss Alice Fay, actress, have been working in a picture.

Miss Fay is the woman with whom Mrs. Vallee, in her separate maintenance suit, accused the singer of being "intimate on numerous occasions." Mrs. Vallee denied the charge emphatically.

assurance of its legality from Capitol Hill through new legislation.

It banishes the possibility of both houses were called to the White House after the president had conferred at length yesterday with Herman O'Hanlon, former counsel to Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau, and Earle Baile, general treasury official and member of a New York brokerage house.

Others Met.
Before the night conference, President Roosevelt met Senator Borah, republican, Idaho; Nye, republican, North Dakota; Harrison, democrat, Mississippi; and Pittman, democrat, Nevada. No official statement on this conference was made, but it was assumed from the senators present that Roosevelt was leaning toward the "gold" when depreciation began.

"This money would be re-invested in American business and the program would start the nation on an unparallelled rise in prosperity," Thomas said. He has prepared a bill calling for nationalization of gold and is merely awaiting word from the White House to introduce it.

Advocating some pronouncement from the White House which would benefit silver, Senator Wheeler, democrat, Montana, author of the bill calling for free coinage of silver, is pressing for action on the measure.

Sprague to Appear.
All independent congressional activity of the money question have not halted, however. The house coinage committee begins hearings tomorrow on dollar stabilization proposals. Dr. O. M. W. Sprague, who resigned as monetary advisor to the treasury after declaring himself to be out of sympathy with the administration's fiscal policies, is to be the first witness.

Chairman of the committee, said he called the hearings only to be helpful. The committee wanted only to be helpful. Senator Thomas has called a meeting here Tuesday of all monetary reform leaders in an effort to unite behind a fixed program. An attempt will be made, it was learned, to reach a common ground upon which the widely separated silver forces can agree.

Gold Buying Listed.
Gold buying, which is wrapped up in the managed currency program, also was listed for discussion tonight. Those close to the administration are of the opinion that it is disappointed in the resulting effect upon the general price level. The theory underlying it is that with gold prices moving up other prices will adjust themselves upward also.

However, even the severe critics of the gold program concede that it has had a large part in holding foreign exchange quotations within a narrow range of fluctuation. The gold buying was begun in late October with emphasis placed upon purchases of domestic gold at a price fixed daily by the treasury. This quotation was increased almost daily throughout November, from an original figure of $31.76.

Exchange rates fluctuated wildly throughout the month. Early in December, gold buying in foreign mar-

American Investors May Lose Millions Through Johnson's Move to Bar Securities of Defaulting Nations.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Financial relations between the United States and Germany, Russia, Great Britain and France may be seriously disturbed if a bill just adopted by the senate ultimately becomes law. The senate itself isn't sure what it has done. Just after the measure, which is aimed at foreign governments that have defaulted on war debts, was passed by an oral vote, Senator Robinson, democratic leader, came into the senate chamber and asked reconsideration.

The bill, sponsored by Senator Hiram Johnson, of California, was reported at the last session of congress. This correspondent directed attention a few weeks ago to the text of the bill, pointing out that unless amended it might mean the loss of hundreds of millions of dollars to innocent American citizens. As the bill was drawn it prohibited any sale of any foreign government bonds, including those now in possession of American citizens or banks or institutions.

DAVID LAWRENCE. President Roosevelt conferred with Senator Johnson after the publication of the newspaper article in question and the California senator intimated an amendment to the effect that the bill should apply only to foreign bonds or securities issued after the bill becomes law. This removes many objections, but the text it reads today still prohibits all loans of any kind to any foreign government which has defaulted on any loan.

The language used in the bill could be construed to affect short-time as well as long-time loans. The purpose of the measure, of course, is to prevent American citizens from buying any securities issued by foreign governments that have defaulted and this is in line with the desire of many Americans, who feel that there ought to be some way to show American displeasure with the repudiation of debts. But while this can be accomplished by prohibiting transactions in bonds issued in the future, the troubles that arise over the renewal of existing short-term loans or the refunding of old issues are numerous.

Thus if the bill that has passed the senate is not changed, it will mean that anybody connected with any bank or institution who approves a credit of any kind to a foreign government may go to jail. It is estimated that about $140,000,000 of short-term notes now are outstanding in the United States which were issued by the German government. The latter is in default on its loans to American citizens, which loans are also made the cause of boycotting a foreign government's securities in the senate bill, though the default was not on a loan held by the American government.

Should the American banks which now hold the $140,000,000 of German credits be unable to renew these loans because they fall under the ban of the law, the German government would probably retaliate in other ways. In other words, a serious financial crisis in the relations between Germany and the United States may be precipitated.

Even more serious are the complications between the United States and Russia on the one hand and the United States and Latin American countries. It would be possible for an injunction to be obtained in the courts asking that no money be loaned to any Russian corporation owned by the Russian government on the ground that this is advancing money to a government which has defaulted on its loans. The war loans made to Russia are in process of settlement but the courts would be bound to recognize them as in a state of default until paid or a final agreement reached to accept smaller payments. It had been thought that a $150,000,000 credit might be made available to the soviet government.

In the case of Cuba, efforts are being made to adjust the financial relations of that country with American holders of Cuban government securities. Usually short-term loans are needed to settle such difficulties. If a loan for Cuba should be needed and the congress was not in session, it would be unlawful under the Johnson bill to extend such credit.

With respect to several South American countries, short-term loans have been or will be necessary. Already Argentina has borrowed on a short-term basis. When the time comes for renewal it may be held unlawful to extend the loan or make a new one, thus embarrassing and punishing American citizens who are innocent victims of the defaults of foreign governments.

What may have to be included in the legislation is some proviso permitting short-term borrowing especially when existing notes or credits are being renewed. Also some amendments may be necessary to care for the temporary credits held by the British and French governments in this country. It has been suggested that the British and French might get around the difficulty by having the Bank of England or the Bank of France maintain credits in America which, of course, would not be covered under the heading of foreign government loans. French cities which have borrowed money in the United States would be prohibited from doing so as well as German cities. In the past the proceeds of such loans have been used to some extent to buy American goods, so it may be anticipated that American producers and manufacturers will be affected by the new law.

From the viewpoint of Senator Johnson, however, short-term loans would only be regarded as a subterfuge in some instances to evade the law, so new language will have to be employed to retain the original objects of the legislation and yet prevent foreign governments from selling their regular bond issues in America until they have paid up on previous issues.

If all this sounds complicated, a record of the discussion in the senate immediately after the bill passed is an indication of how the senate acted without really going into the far-reaching implications of the bill. It may be expected that the bill will be thoroughly canvassed before it becomes law and no doubt the necessary amendments will be inserted in the senate or in the house.

tor-general of railroads in 1918. Two years later he was promoted to head the organization.

After the railroads had been turned back to private operation, Hines was appointed arbitrator under the peace treaties on questions of river shipping in Europe.

From the summer of 1925 he was asked to make an investigation for the League of Nations on navigation on the Rhine and the Danube. At the close of his investigation the League assembly praised his work.

Only two years ago the League again asked him to participate in another mission, as the American member of an inquiry into the Manchurian situation. He declined, however, because of other duties.

Hines headed a group of American specialists, just before the Fashoda incident, in developing a five-year plan to industrialize Turkey. It was described as seeking to transform "an economically backward and primitive agricultural nation into one of the most highly cultured nations of the world." The final report was made public only last week and provided for a $32,000,000 outlay to develop 15 state factories and exploit natural resources.

GEN. JEAN MARCHAND.
PARIS, Jan. 14.—(AP)—General Jean Baptiste Marchand, principal French figure in the Fashoda incident, which brought France and England to the verge of war in 1898, died at his home today at the age of 70.

General Marchand, after being summoned to do so by Lord Kitchener, refused to evacuate the Fashoda fort in the Upper Nile region, which the French had constructed during British Dervish hostilities.

The fort eventually was evacuated after diplomatic negotiations. On his return to France General Marchand was received as a national hero.

He resigned from the army in 1904 and later politics, in which he was not very successful. In 1914 he returned to the army as colonel of a brigade, distinguishing himself at the battle of Argonne.

Dangerously wounded at Argonne, he returned to the front and played

Beauty of Color, Form and Motion Marks Dancing by Uday Shan-Kar

Flowing rhythm expressed through a perfect body perfectly controlled briefly describes the art of Uday Shan-Kar, Hindu dancer, who appeared in Atlanta Sunday afternoon. With a troupe consisting of two women dancers and about a dozen men, musicians and dancers, he gave a recital of Hindu dances that for sheer beauty of color, form and motion was unlike anything Atlanta has ever seen before.

The beauty of Shan-Kar's dancing is utterly aesthetic. It appeals both to the love of physical beauty and to that indefinite hunger of the soul for beauty indefinable but all pervasive. You feel, as you watch him, that there is something you can't quite describe, whispering and striving to break through from some other realm, some nearby but unseen plane, alien, yet strangely lovely and true.

His dancing is strange to occidentals. It is restrained and quiet. He gets most of his effects with the movements of his arms and hands and fingers. And even with his neck and shoulders. His legs aid only incidentally in the total effect. Yet there is something strangely alluring, even compelling, in the constant rhythmic flow of motion and, though our minds may not quite grasp the stories his dances tell, yet watching him we feel sympathetic and hungry to know the message of his dances more completely.

Two girls are in his company. One, Simkie, is a French girl who has been accepted as a complete convert to Hinduism. The other, Kanak-Lata, is a native Hindu. Both are beautiful and both are thorough adepts at the dancing their master, Shan-Kar, has taught.

One man, Debendra by the program, did a solo dance of the hunt, wildly effective and utterly primitive in style. The native orchestra played scores of strange native instruments, every one strange to American audiences. They play sitting cross-legged upon

Fair, Warm Weather Forecast for Atlanta

Warmer weather was promised Atlanta today by the United States weather bureau.

The bureau reported that indications were that the temperature would rise late Sunday night and today and that the skies would be clear. The temperature range has been in the forties and fifties for the past day or so but slightly warmer weather is expected for Atlanta and Georgia, beginning today.

Plaintive strains from the strings are punctuated by the beat of palms against myriad kinds of drums, while metal discs and other contrivances add weird overtones of sound and pulsing beats of time.

There was an excellent audience, though the Capitol theater, where the program was given as one of the Celebrity Series of attractions, was not full. Those there, however, found something new and something to haunt them with its beauty for many days to come and those who stayed away missed an experience that would have made them spiritually richer.

Part of Consumer in 'New Deal' To Be Discussed Here by Lecturer

Dr. Alva Taylor, of Vanderbilt University, will deliver the second of the Atlanta citizenship lecture series at Wesley Memorial church at 8 o'clock tonight. Speaking on "Your Money's Worth," Dr. Taylor will discuss the consumer's part in the "New Deal," emphasizing the consumer's need of protection against exploitation and fraud and the interdependence of producer and consumer.

Dr. Taylor, who is a teacher of social ethics and editor of "Social Trends," has an unusual background of study and experience in the field of economics, abroad as well as in America. He was a member of the national committee which investigated the steel strike in 1919, went to Europe to study post-war industrial conditions, was a delegate to the Institute of Pacific Peoples in Honolulu in 1925, and has been on a number of good-will missions to Mexico. He is now chairman of the industrial committee of the Federal Council of Churches, are secretary of social welfare of the Disciples church. He writes for a number of liberal journals and is the author of a number of books on social and economic subjects.

Tickets will be on sale at the door at nominal prices, either for the single lecture or for the remaining five numbers of the series to be given on successive Monday nights, concluding with Norman Thomas on February 12. On next Monday night Carl Thompson, of Chicago, will speak on "Confessions of the Power Trust."

Mrs. A. S. Terry and W. Vaden Parks, of Miami, led the field to win trophies emblematic of east and west championships.

Charles H. Porter and William F. Hopkins, Cincinnati district champions, headed the north and south division, their score, however, being second to that of Mrs. Terry and Mr. Parks.

MRS. T. R. FLOYD DIES AFTER SHORT ILLNESS

Mother of Two Atlanta Policemen Was Widow of Baptist Minister.

Mrs. T. R. Floyd, 75 years of age, the widow of the Rev. T. R. Floyd, widely-known Baptist minister, and the mother of C. E. and R. E. Floyd, twins and members of the Atlanta police department, died late Saturday at her residence at 1830 Dekalb avenue.

Mrs. Floyd had been ill only a short time. Her husband was the pastor of one church for 27 years, a record for continuous service in his section. She is survived by two other sons; five daughters; 28 grandchildren, and 15 great-grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the Redan Baptist church, at Redan, Ga. The Rev. T. T. Davis, the Rev. S. F. Lowe, and the Rev. Marvin Williams will officiate and interment will be in the churchyard, with J. Austin Dillon Company in charge. In addition to the sons who are policemen, Mrs. Floyd is survived by John H. and C. L. Floyd; and the daughters, Mrs. J. A. Nolan, Mrs. C. B. Baird, Mrs. C. J. Eberhardt, Mrs. J. T. Braswell, and Mrs. Lester G. Hodge.

CYCLORAMA WORK BY CWA ARTISTS PLANNED BY BOARD

Conservative employment and expenditure in the CWA art projects will be exercised beginning today, Wilbur G. Kurtz, who is in charge of the work under J. J. Haverty, regional director, announced Sunday but he added that projects already started would be finished and that he hoped at least one new project would be undertaken.

Under the terms of the federal government the CWA art work will continue until February 15, and the directors in the state have planned the use of practically the entire amount of money allocated to Atlanta and to Georgia. Mr. Kurtz asserted. The new project he hopes will be started is completion of the illusion of the Cyclorama at Grant park. Appeals to the government to extend the CWA art projects and to allot more money to aid unemployed artists who are carrying out a scheme of beautification of public buildings have already been made in Washington, Mr. Kurtz said. As yet there has been no indication of the government's attitude toward the extension.

U. S. BONDS LEAD MART RECOVERY

By VICTOR EUBANK.
NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(P)—A slump and later recovery of United States government securities, together with a substantial rally of corporate issues, were the features of an unusually active bond market during the past week.

The prospective borrowing of some $10,000,000,000 by the government during the next six months, coupled with a probability that the national debt will approximate $35,000,000,000 by 1936, were unsettling factors in the federal section and there was hurried switching of long for short-term issues in addition to some nervous selling.

Several of the treasuries broke to new 1933-34 lows before support arrived. The rally started on Thursday when bids appeared from numerous "bargain hunters." At the same time treasury purchases for the sinking fund and other accounts were rumored along with institutional investment.

The upturn in the federals, as well as in the corporate groups, was attributed partly to reports that the administration was submitting a revaluation of the dollar in terms of gold. Along with these reports, advice from Washington stated that Attorney General Cummings had submitted an opinion to the president regarding the ways and means of impounding some $3,600,000,000 of gold now held by the Federal Reserve system.

Bond circles generally were inclined to accept these happenings as indications that the administration was preparing to make some new move regarding its monetary policy. There was a renewal of buying from the theory, dealers said, that dollar stabilization was near. Foreign observers, it was added, believed the American monetary unit might be revalued at its present theoretical gold price of around 60 cents with the president retaining his power to further reduce the value to 50 cents if he found it desirable.

The rails and utilities were also spurred by news that President Roosevelt believed sinking funds for bonded debts should be provided and that regulatory bodies should consider this in rate making. The utilities, which had been dropping for months, came back buoyantly. Best gains, however, were scored by the railroads which had additional aid from improving business. There were pronounced increases in freight car loadings.

The president's message to congress recommending legislation for the guarantee of both interest and principal on $2,000,000,000 of farm credit administration bonds was one of the highlights of the week. Similar recommendation on $2,000,000,000 of home loan bonds was expected soon.

Most foreign obligations exhibited strength. The Germans were the most active gainers, although they dipped later in the week. Substantial advances were registered by bonds of Brazil, Finland, Argentina, Australia, Austria, Copenhagen and Norway. Issues of the gold standard countries did little as their currencies were rather narrow in foreign exchange dealings.

HOLDUPS, BURGLARIES REPORTED TO POLICE

Man Robbed of $10 by Acquaintance; Feed Store Bandits Are Still at Large.

As police continued to search without avail for four armed white bandits who late Saturday afternoon robbed the Southern Feed stores, at 80 Milton avenue, S. E., of more than $1,000, many small robberies and burglaries were reported to the department Sunday.

Thumbed Sunday morning at North avenue and the A. B. & C. railroad tracks by a man he said he knew, Spencer F. Keller, of 315 McAfee street, furnished police with the man's name and an early arrest was expected. Spencer said his acquaintance took a check for $10 and a small amount of cash from him at the point of a gun.

Robert Carter, 24-year-old negro, of 845 Greenleaf avenue, an employee of the Shell filling station at Evans and Gordon streets, was caught in the act of robbing his own place of business early Sunday morning by Radio Officers Roy Wall and R. C. Tuggle, and was arrested on "suspicion." The patrolmen, while cruising, noticed the front door of the station open and found Carter inside. He had entered with a pass key, he said.

Awakened by a noise, H. A. Morgan, a roomer in the residence of J. L. Farason, of 314 Dalton street, S. E., fired a load of buckshot at a fleeing burglar early Sunday morning just as the man was about to make his getaway in a car. The shot punctured the tires of the automobile and the would-be burglar escaped on foot. The machine was confiscated by police.

Patrolmen Wall and Tuggle, a short time before they captured the negro burglar, saw another negro break out a window in a store at 503 Lee street but the man escaped after they had fired at him.

The Williams Candy Kitchen, at 249 Edgewood avenue, and the residence of G. L. Bailey, of 533 Capitol avenue, were also entered Sunday morning. Variety losing $10 and the candy kitchen a quantity of tobacco.

M. M. Moore, of 40 Jephtha street, reported that he was held up at 423 Rock street by a white man and a negro and robbed of $25 and his automobile.

F. C. Cantrell, and Roscoe Thornton, negroes, who gave their addresses as 138 Cone street, told the police that two negroes attacked them at Auburn and Piedmont avenues and robbed them of $27 from Cantrell and $3 from Thornton. Buster Nolan, negro, was arrested in the vicinity later and identified by the two men as one of the robbers.

GEORGIA CWA MOVES TO DOWNTOWN OFFICE

The civil workers administration of Georgia, of which Miss Gay B. Shepherd is director, moved Sunday from its quarters in the old Second Baptist church to the new location on the sixth and seventh floors of the 10 Forsyth street building, it was announced.

Need for more space was the reason for the change. The larger quarters have an area of 28,000 square feet. The two floors were leased Sunday.

In Georgia's Fields and Streams

By H. A. CARTER

FUR FARMING.

While it is commonly asserted that the pelts of southern animals are not as desirable as those of fur-bearers from the frozen north, there are a number of places in north Georgia that are well suited to fur-farming, and which would produce furs of extraordinarily fine quality. So far as I know, there is not one such farm in that region.

It is true that starting and maintaining a fur farm calls for some outlay of capital. One should not expect to be on a profitable basis for some years; at least four years are required ordinarily before the original investment begins to pay. It calls for work of a constant and painstaking sort, for furs must be made glossy and prime before they are worth taking. Feeding, cleaning the ranges, breeding, choosing which stock to sell and which to save, demand as many hours as one can give. But in the end, there is a handsome business waiting. It just needs developing.

One prime requisite for success in this field is to choose a fur that is not already too cheap; one that is always in demand, such as fox. Silver fox is an animal of the north, but our native red fox is the bearer of a fine pelt, and one that always brings a fair price. I don't remember ever having heard of weasel farming for profit, but I believe it could be made to pay. I know that even rabbit furs have their value, but just what it may be I cannot say.

Muskrat is a good fur, while one of the cheapest. Farming these beasts, however, would call for some experience in hydraulic surveys for they do not thrive away from water. Raccoon, I should think, would be a most desirable fur to farm. Any trapper can tell you what furs are bringing good prices and what are not, and it is his advice that should be followed.

Someone who already owns land in the mountains, but has no use for it except for summer camping, will do well to investigate the subject. I understand that there are a number of government bulletins that tell how to begin fur farming. There are doubtless volumes and volumes that give elaborate directions for producing good crops of furs. I think I have heard of some of those books, and I will look them up for anyone that is interested.

The only thing that calls the subject to mind now is the fact that in traveling northward by automobile, I have seen fur farms in adjoining states occupying sites that are no whit better suited to our own mountains.

Who is overlooking a good opportunity?

expected in view of her mode of living, for 5,000 francs is only about $800.

Mme. Arlette Simon Stavisky, widow of the financier, was more talkative but of course was not present at the end of her husband's life in the street-capped Alpine Hotel. Stavisky, a former mannikin, said she was convinced letters Stavisky left were genuine, and that he had committed suicide.

"I was aware of the other women in his life," she said, "but I told Mme. Almeras refused to talk, 'but they were mostly spies'."

Mme. Stavisky was bitter about the manner in which the gendarmes treated her husband after the shooting. She declared her husband would certainly be alive today "if he had not been left two hours without medical attention."

"The doctors told me the body contained but one quart of blood at the moment of death."

Discussing her romance with the picturesque financial adventurer, Mme. Stavisky said:

"We met nine years ago. It was love at first sight. I wore him a son while he was serving 18 months in jail, and when he was released we were married. I wanted him to live in the country but he was always floating financial schemes which we agreed not to discuss."

NEW ORLEANS CHIEF BANS MARCUS SHOW

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 14.—(P)—George Reyer, superintendent of police, tonight issued an order barring representation in municipal auditorium here of the Marcus show, a girlie revue featuring a French fan dancer in the nude. The show was billed for a midnight performance tonight.

The new men's shoes for 1934 have arrived at Muse's. Smart and graceful in appearance—yet as staunch and masculine looking as the finest English footwear—the new shoes are already popular with well-dressed men.

Shoes occupy an important place in a man's wardrobe. A man can remove his hat and still be dressed. He can remove his coat and vest and still be dressed. But when he takes off his shoes, he is undressed. Frequently the only difference in the appearance of two men is the difference in their shoes—and sometimes, what a difference!

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE.

Uncas Cressap and his Chinese servant are found dead in the upper room of Cressap's house on Kettle pond, near the eastern end of Long Island. Gilbert Jonathan Redd, Cressap's stepbrother, keeps a written, private account of developments in the case. A blow on the forehead from a slender, sharp edged implement killed Cressap. The cause of the Chinaman's death is not apparent. Captain Bray, a special investigator, and an old friend of Redd's, helps the men from the district attorney's office in solving the crime. Redd is a former police reporter. Florence Lane, Cressap's niece and an orphan, lived with him. Redd was fond of Florence's mother. He bought a house near Cressap's in order to protect Florence. Cressap made his fortune in the far east. Redd freely admits to Bray his hatred of Cressap, who was a drunkard and a debauchee. The Chinaman and a dwarf, Sabinio, are the most important of the servants, and there seemed to be some secret bond between them and their master. Bray calls the members of the household together for questioning. He has found, spread out on Cressap's desk, a new plan for discharging Florence. As it is unsigned the old maid stands. Cressap had disapproved of Florence's mother. He had a heart, Gregory Thorpe, who had arrived the day before, having driven east from his home in Ohio in response to an urgent wire from Florence. Thorpe can't be reached at the local hotel where he registered as George Thomas. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

INSTALLMENT XIX.

"What kind of a stony-hearted ruffian do you take me for, man? Would I be running to her now, and she on the flat of her back and supping sorrow every breath she draws, to tell her what she'll have to know sooner or later anyhow? Would I, without there was need of it, be hurting her more than already she's been hurt? You make me sick!"

In a huff he turned his back on me and stalked away toward the main house. After a minute or so I followed him, but I didn't see him about the place as I skirted it. So I tramped home and when I got there, went to bed and tried to get some sleep. Once asleep, I slept. The morning was almost gone when I woke up and then I had a snack of luncheon and sat down to write all this out.

Here at the finish of this installment I must add one scrap more: The identity of that nocturnal caller of mine is no longer a secret. Just before lunch I went scouting, and in a patch of loamy soil at one end of my low porch I found shoeprints. The marks left by the soles were of proportions suitable for a fully developed male adult, but the spacing between each pair of tracks was abnormally short. There is only one individual here in Bridgeton who has feet that are man-sized and legs that are child's length.

Same date, evening. I stayed in all afternoon. I did begin with it at the beginning of it.

Having turned in at what for one of my habits is a fairly early hour, I was up before Mrs. Bevil, who is a lie-abed herself, had started clattering her pans and pots. By 6 o'clock I was dressed and outdoors to see whether my stratagem against Sabinio's clandestine snoop, if renewed, had borne any fruitage.

It had borne fruit. He came and he went and the little half-caste him calling came in pairs abundantly scattered behind him. My device had been simple enough. All I did was to spread a thin coating of softened and moistened mud on my porch flooring. I sifted them to make sure there would be no telltale crunching of charred cinders under any softly treading feet, and I moistened them so they would stick to the boards and not scurry away if during the night the breeze freshened. And, sure enough this morning that thin gray film was intact except that across its surface, plain as Batik, were the crossing and the cross-crossings of those same close-coupled, reeled over tracks, with the heels more lightly indented than the tips, thereby proving that the owner of these shoes had been traveling a cautious tiptoe as he tacked to and fro. There were scuffed prints to show where, teetering and shifting on his pins, he had stood before the broad panorama window and also before the small millioned casements which flank it, but elsewhere the tracks were as distinct as though they had been stamped in like block patterns on gray tapa.

Continuing the hunt I presently came upon even dirtier patent evidences of an attempted evasion. For I found raw new scratches, small gouges, really, in the woodwork on one of the windows before he centered his attack on this particular one, but here the felonious intent was revealed clearly enough.

Well, so far so good. This second time the dwarf had been baffled. Next time, though, that he turns amateur housebreaker it is reasonable to assume he will come better prepared to effect an entrance. But what, amazingly, may his purpose be in all this? By it, what end does he expect to gain? No man in his right mind is taking a chance on being shot for a burglar unless he has a tempting object in view. The beleaguering matters that I have to ponder on are increased by this significant addition. On this, however, I am resolved. With them, all and several, I shall cope single-handed or not at all. Indeed, some reclassifying and relisting in one of the cabinets of my collections, spent an hour or so with my dogs, and for dinner had in half a dozen reporters—anything to keep me from brooding on the existent aspect of this affair. Purposely I stayed away from Florence. Try as hard as I might to maintain an optimistic mien, I feared that I still would be a Sir Knight of the Rueful Countenance and that her stricken eyes, searching mine for any small ray of hope, would read the truth in them. But at intervals I called Hilda and at each time of calling she had for me practically the same tidings, namely: That Florence seemed more reconciled today or a few more composed, and that Dr. Finch was tapering off on the sedative he prescribed on Tuesday night when she was felled so cruelly.

My dinner guests mostly talked shop with this present coverage of their part in the case. That was inevitable. They don't think much of Motley's abilities, but they gave Bray credit for a certain intelligent perspicacity. They agreed that until the search for the green Folker and its fugitive driver brought definite results the story at this end probably would be more or less static. Bob Skipp, of the American, thought that lacking new impetus down here his office would be calling him back to town before long. I like Skipp. Out of the set of the editor the volatile Mrs. Bevil's cookery and preyed on my supply of Scotch until two quarts of it had been consumed Skipp is the only one whose career as a city newspaper man dates back beyond the year when mine ended.

I shall turn in pretty soon now, but before I turn in I shall risk a small snare on the chance that the inquisitive Mr. Sabinio pays these premises another prying visit between now and tomorrow.

Another day, another crowded day. I'll begin with it at the beginning of it.

Wagner Electric Corp. Executive Sounds Warning Against Faulty Brakes

HUGE DEATH TOLL CITED BY MARSH IN VOICING PLEA

Well Equipped Plant Prepared To Render Complete Service on Auto Brakes, Alignment.

Accidents must go! The nation has been aroused, says H. E. Marsh, manager of the Wagner Electric Corporation, by the recent announcement that during 1933 a total of approximately 30,500 persons were killed in the United States in automobile accidents.

Recalling that the national safety council, in announcing the huge crash toll, stated it represented an increase of approximately 1.2 per cent over 1932, Mr. Marsh issues a stirring plea—entirely aside from business reasons—for a check-up of brake defects as a means of reducing the toll in the coming year.

Mr. Marsh is a safety enthusiast. Whether his enthusiasm motivated his choice of a profession, or whether his business engendered the enthusiasm is a moot question, but one which matters little here. The fact remains that not only during business hours but at all other times, he preaches the gospel of safety—and always earnestly and unselfishly from a business standpoint.

Winter Is Crash Time. "Atlanta already has felt the sharp bite of winter," he says, "and motorists have experienced that helpless feeling that comes with driving over slippery roads and streets in a wintry rain. It is during such weather as this that accidents are most likely to occur—and will occur unless one's brakes are kept in perfect condition."

It is given perhaps to but few men for the southeast to know brakes as Mr. Marsh and his associates at the Wagner Electric Corporation shop know them. It is their business.

The Wagner Electric Corporation, which maintains a completely equipped plant and offices at 14 Alexander street, N. W., specializes in brake installation, adjustment and maintenance.

The official Lockheed brake service station in Atlanta, it maintains at all times a full stock of genuine parts, and serves as distributor for Lockheed products throughout the southeast.

Most Modern Equipment. Only the most modern equipment is maintained by the Wagner Electric Corporation, thus assuring its customers of the ultimate in brake service. This includes the huge Cowdrey brake tester—one of two of the largest devices of its kind in the south—the Barnes and Fisher brake shoe grinder (for the reconditioning and restoration of worn brake drums and adjustable for the grinding of brake lining for oversized drums) and recently installed line removers for the scientific correcting of front end deficiencies.

The company maintains a complete inspection, test and adjustment service, particularly with regard to wheels, brakes and electrical equipment. In this connection, Mr. Marsh emphasizes the importance of a thorough check to put the automobile in perfect condition for winter driving.

New Mather equipment for the proper alignment of wheels and axles also recently has been installed.

Mr. Marsh invites automobile owners to visit the Wagner plant for a check of possible deficiencies in order to avoid chance accidents during the coming snow and slush of later winter.

The Smithsonian institution has added to its exhibit the first practical electric refrigerator.

The Family Investment Program

When thinking of the future of his family every man faces two financial problems affecting their welfare. The first is to leave them an adequate estate. The second is to leave them the estate in such a way that there can be no loss and at all times an adequate income. To solve these problems—Guaranteed Investment Policy

Boulder Crest Nurseries' Landscape Men Offer Expert Service on Home Planting

In this corner of the extensive grounds of the Boulder Crest Nurseries, on Boulder Crest drive, just beyond East Atlanta, one sees the successful results of expert landscaping service—one of the featured phases of the nurseries' work. The Boulder Crest Nurseries, of which Jesse E. Brannen is proprietor, specializes in coniferous and broad-leaved evergreens, vines, flowering shrubs and rose bushes.

No matter how extensive or how small your problem, says Jesse E. Brannen, proprietor, the Boulder Crest Nurseries can develop a planting plan for you that will be a source of pleasure through the years. Mr. Brannen stresses the value and importance of landscape planting now, in order to gain the full benefit with the arrival of spring.

The Boulder Crest Nurseries maintains a landscaping department to serve the small home, estate or realty owner in all his planting problems. "Your investment in trees, shrubs and plants," says Mr. Brannen, "can be made to bring results which will be highly profitable, as well as gratifying from the standpoint of beauty. We will help you plan your planting to obtain the best placing of trees and shrubs, so as to get immediate results and permanent satisfaction."

"Our landscaping department is under the supervision of men whose good judgment and good taste, founded on practical knowledge and experience, enables them to give you a reliable and valuable service."

The Boulder Crest Nurseries, established in 1919, specializes in coniferous and broad-leaved evergreens, vines, flowering shrubs and rose bushes. Occupying a tract of 510 acres, of which approximately 60 acres are under cultivation, it grows 120 distinct varieties of hardy ornamental trees and shrubbery especially adapted to southern climate. Its growing nursery stock includes approximately 2,000 rose bushes, of which there are at least 20 distinct varieties.

"We grow the most important varieties of shade trees," says Mr. Brannen, "such as mimosa, Carolina poplar, Lombardy poplar, tulip poplar, dogwood, hackberry, China umbrella, oaks, flowering peach, sycamore, willows and others."

Nursery Trees Best. The intelligent tree planters, he adds, readily appreciate the difference in value between a tree dug in the forest and one taken from a nursery, where it has received the proper care during the first year of its life. The one, he points out, is tall, slender, and with only a small top; the other is sturdy, with well-developed trunk and a top that is a promise of its future beauty and usefulness as a shade tree.

The Boulder Crest Nurseries are situated five miles from the heart of Atlanta, part of their acres being within the city limits. They may be reached by driving out Flat Shoals road through East Atlanta and turning into Boulder Crest drive about one mile out. Visitors are invited at any time.

The Boulder Crest landscaping service, offered for your convenience and benefit, may be obtained by calling or writing. Appointments for consultation and inspection will be made to suit you.

UTILITIES IN VAN IN CURB ADVANCE

Early-Week Sluggishness Gives Way to Bullish Demonstrations.

By JOHN L. COOLEY.

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—(P)—Recent markets have witnessed a selective advance on the curb exchange, utilities taking a leading part in the advances.

Initial sluggishness last week gave way to moderate bullish demonstrations around midweek, but profit-taking checked the advance and later dealings slipped back into dullness. Power shares had their best moments on Wednesday and Thursday, getting their inspiration from word that President Roosevelt favored sinking funds for funded debts and that this should be considered by agencies having jurisdiction over rates.

Whitehall Chevrolet Co. Stresses Quality, Friendliness and Service

The triumvirate of factors which have made countless other business enterprises moderately successful—quality, friendliness and service—have made for the Whitehall Chevrolet Company one of the foremost automotive dealers in the southeast, 329-331 Whitehall street, S. W.

"A Good Product and a Friendly Service"—the company's slogan—is responsible in a large degree, declares Hal Smith, general manager, for the phenomenal popularity enjoyed by the Whitehall Chevrolet Company during the six brief years of its life.

If you should doubt the importance of the Whitehall Chevrolet Company in the southeastern automotive world, consider these figures: Since its organization in September, 1927, it has sold more than 2,500 new Chevrolet and over 5,400 used cars in the Atlanta territory.

Sales Reflect Improvement. Further, if you should doubt the off-repeated assertion that the cover has been turned by business, just consider these figures, too: During 1933, the Whitehall Chevrolet Company sold 475 new units, compared with a total of 290 during 1932. Of used cars, it sold 1,034 during 1933, as compared with 767 during 1932.

From a small beginning in one & Share, American Gas, American Light & Traction, as well as a number of preferred issues, made good gains.

General Tire & Rubber and Safety Car Heating strengthened. American Cyanamid "B," on which a dividend is being paid, was active and generally firm.

Transfers were slightly in excess of the previous week, averaging more than 200,000 shares for each five-hour session.

WALKER STRESSES AIR CONDITIONING AS HOME BENEFIT

Aire-Flo Cleanses, Deodorizes, Purifies and Humidifies Air, Says Roofing Executive.

The day of home air-conditioning is definitely here, according to Charles N. Walker, president of the Walker Roofing Company, 141 Houston street, N. E., who reports recent installation of a number of Torrid Zone Aire-Flo conditioning units in Atlanta homes. "Few people realize," Mr. Walker declares, "the importance and advantages of such a heating and ventilating system, which conditions the air in winter and cools it in summer. Once used only in palatial theaters and large office buildings, it has been developed to such a degree that the most modest home may derive its benefits in health and fuel economy."

The Aire-Flo, he points out, is simple and reasonable in price—the answer to the growing public demand for conditioned air on a basis that every home-owner can afford. Its price compares favorably with the old-fashioned vapor and hot water systems which only heat a building and cannot condition the air in winter or cool it in summer.

Keeps Air Healthful. From a standpoint of health, Mr. Walker asserts, the Aire-Flo is a contribution of inestimable value. With it, you are master of the weather inside your home both winter and summer. In winter you live in a comfortably warmed home; a gentle flow of tropical warmth is moved through every room by the silent electric blower. All air is drawn through blower and water can be easily cleaned of all dust and impurities, deodorized, purified and humidified.

"For instance," says Mr. Walker, "colds, influenza, pneumonia and beriberis are traced to dry air, since parched membranes of the nose and throat are ideal lodging places for cold germs."

The average house requires at least one and a half gallons of water per room per day. This moisture the Aire-Flo supplies in abundance, regulated to the needs of the house and equally diffused through every room. You need no longer breathe stifling, stagnant, baked dry air. Seventy degrees in humidified air offers more comfort than 75 degrees in dry air."

Aids Radiation Systems. In homes now heated by radiation systems (steam, hot water and vapor), Mr. Walker points out, the Aire-Flo blower and water can be easily installed to provide ventilation, air purification, humidification and summer cooling. Air conditioning experts will gladly supply information or estimates on these features upon request.

Mr. Walker stresses the fact the Aire-Flo user is not limited to any one type of fuel, since there is a Torrid Zone generator for every type of fuel—soft coal, hard coal, coke, oil or natural or manufactured gas.

The Charles N. Walker Roofing Company, which also specializes in tunneling and waterproofing, furnaces and furnace cleaning as well as the materials its name indicates, has been in business in Atlanta for 27 years.

The company has many countless friends through its high standard of workmanship.

Benefit of Friendships. To these friendships Mr. Walker attributes much of the company's success and popularity in business. "If it were not for the many satisfied customers we have made in the past," he states, "we could not have stayed in business for almost three decades—especially during the years of the depression."

As a positive indication that business has begun its long heralded upturn, Mr. Walker points proudly to the fact his company, during the first five days of January alone, did more business than in any entire month of 1933.

"We see the silver lining," he declares, "and attribute the clearing away of the business clouds to President Roosevelt's positive action toward relieving distress and putting business back on a firm footing."

Air conditioning of homes and other buildings may become a chief weapon against the common cold, predicts an official of the electrical industry.

General Oil 'Power Prover' Aids Large Truck Users

Device Infallibly Locates Engine Faults, Makes Possible Elimination of Gasoline Waste.

Atlanta business concerns employing large fleets of automobile trucks are finding the "power prover" truck, operated here by the General Oil Company, invaluable in finding and eliminating motor faults largely responsible for gasoline waste.

So great has become the demand for its service that the General Oil Company has found it necessary to place the "power prover" on an "appointment" basis, according to J. Paul Jones, president of the company.

Production of these "power provers," Mr. Jones predicts, "will be greatly increased in the coming year, due to heavy demands from every section of the country. The machine, which tests automobile efficiency, have been installed in only about 100 cities."

Frequent Troubles. Statistics compiled as a result of testing and scientifically adjusting 250,000 cars on the "power prover," Mr. Jones asserts, "have indicated that the vast majority of all cars on the highways have the following troubles: Wrong ignition timing, bad spark plugs, faulty breaker points and poorly adjusted carburetors."

The records indicate that out of every 100 cars on the road today, 90 have faulty ignition timing; in 50 the spark plugs probably would fail when tested; on 37 the carburetor is most likely out of adjustment, and 57 would have badly pitted breaker points.

It is estimated, says Mr. Jones, that these motor adjustments waste as much as one gallon out of every ten. Hence, if these mechanical troubles hold good for all cars, these easily corrected faults are costing motorists an average of about $3.31 annually. In other words, the nation's drivers are needlessly wasting 1,425,017,329 gallons of gasoline at an estimated yearly cost of $189,000,000.

Faults Easily Detected. With the "power prover," Mr. Jones asserts, "such faults are easily discovered and scientifically adjusted to manufacturers' specifications."

The mechanic inserts a tube into the exhaust pipe and a sample of the gases is drawn into the analyzer, where it is cleaned, mixed with a definite amount of air, and burned. The amount of fuel being wasted is instantly registered on a dial.

The mechanic then starts adjusting the motor, following a comprehensive 12-step tuning routine. Each step is checked against further power readings, until a minimum of gasoline loss is registered.

The General Oil Company invites automobile owners to take advantage of this modern invention, designed especially for the checking and correction of motor faults. Many large Atlanta concerns recently have employed it to place their truck fleets in perfect mechanical condition and to reduce gasoline waste.

The "power prover" truck is available upon call through the General Oil Company office, at 708 Jefferson street, or any of its many filling stations here.

COTTON ADVANCES TO HIGH LEVELS IN ACTIVE WEEK

Trading Shows Increase; Every Decline Encountered Meets Strong Resistance.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 14.—(P)—Trading has been decidedly active in the cotton market during the past week and prices continued to advance until at the highest point the level was $6 a bale over the prices prevailing at the time the market adjourned for the Christmas holidays.

Towards the close of the week there was some indisposition to work for a reaction on the part of professional traders on the theory that after so considerable an advance some decline was due, but every decline met strong resistance and as the week closed the understone was again quite firm and the closing prices showed net gains for the week compared with Saturday last of 34 to 35 points. The week was strong, the net advance in the final day of the week being 17 to 20 points.

The market while watching the course of stocks and grain closely was influenced mainly by developments within the market itself. The advancing tendency was helped materially by the good trade demand and the rather extensive price fixing. There was a good deal of taking out of hedges placed against spots due to the sale of actual. There was more or less selling of distant months reputedly for government account but this selling was readily absorbed by trade buying.

The high, low, close for the futures market compared with a year ago.
